

Statoil chooses Rolta OneView™ for their Enterprise Operational Excellence Programme

Mumbai – Rolta today announced that Statoil, the international energy company, headquartered in Norway, and present in more than 37 countries around the world, has chosen Rolta OneView®, as a part of initiatives focused on raising efficiencies in operations and maintenance of their global operations. Rolta's engagement is to initially carry out a project to provide key insights to help identify areas that offer potential for improvement, and then configure Rolta OneView® for an enterprise implementation, for helping Statoil to achieve their operational excellence goals.

This selection recognizes some unique capabilities of Rolta OneView® that are of specific relevance to Statoil's business. It is a prebuilt enterprise-level solution and addresses the needs of enterprises to rapidly exploit the business value of Big Data and OT-IT integration through diagnostic, predictive and prescriptive analytics through its 3000+ pre-built performance metrics and business-value scenarios. By leveraging Rolta's patented technologies that facilitate real time integration of data from disparate Operations and Business systems, Rolta OneView® offers cross-functional visibility of Operations, Assets, Maintenance, Reliability, Supply Chain, Health Safety/Environment, Projects and Business insights across an enterprise.

Mr. K.K. Singh, Chairman & Managing Director of Rolta said, "We are delighted to be working with Statoil on this multimillion dollar strategic initiative. We are bringing our global domain experience, coupled with in-depth expertise in diagnostic, prescriptive and predictive analytics, to bear on this operational excellence programme."
